

Helene Wetherington, CEM
Director, Volusia County Emergency Management Division

Helene has 27 years of emergency management experience serving in governmental leadership positions with the State of Florida, the counties of Palm Beach, Monroe, and Volusia in Florida. She has also supported a range of public sector clients through her consulting firm and served as an international emergency management advisor in the Caribbean. Her professional career has focused on building community resilience through community preparedness, disaster response, and long-term recovery in over twenty federally declared disasters. Ms. Wetherington focuses her experience in the support of all hazards, multi-disciplinary planning and capacity building. She holds Master's Degrees from Florida State University and Florida Atlantic University and has received executive leadership training from Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government. She is certified by the International Association of Emergency Managers, served on numerous professional and academic boards and has presented in a range of venues nationally.

