

Hello and Greetings from General Motors,

We are excited to announce the launch of our online training content at GMEVfirstrespondertraining.com.

There you'll find several videos and other information about additional resources available to you for continued awareness about electrified vehicles, as well as improved preparedness for your Team.

To the more than 5,000 first and second responders from over 700 different departments/agencies that we delivered the hands-on training to over the last two years across the United States and Canada, we sincerely thank you, and welcome you to review the content.

Please spread the word about our engagement efforts with the Emergency Response communities and let us know your thoughts about the training we have continued to offer at no-cost. We look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

The GM Battery Electric Vehicle First Responder Training Team
